

Parsnip

For long, well-developed roots, parsnips need to be planted in loose, well-drained soil.

There is no need to feed parsnips throughout the growing season. The addition of Dynamic Lifter at planting time is plenty of nourishment for the developing roots.

Water regularly to keep the soil moist. You may want to cover the soil with shade cloth or a piece of wood over the row to keep it evenly moist. Continue to water regularly and deeply throughout the long growing season (they can take over 4-5 months to reach full maturity).

They are a classic ingredient in some chicken broths and soups, and can also be baked, steamed, mashed or roasted.
